I am by no means a huge gambler, I like to throw some money on a game here and there and every once in a while I do enjoy sitting down at a blackjack table in a casino.

But one thing I do understand is the math behind it. I refuse to come off as a sore loser who sounds like a complete moron, but someone needs to explain to me why when I play the demo, the cards seem to tilt in my favor, the dealer busts once every 3-4 hands, and the dealer shows a 2,3,4,5 or 6 once about every 5-8 hands (yes, I counted through many games and averaged it) Tj T* E

Now here's the conundrum:

As soon as I switch over to real blackjack where I use real funds, everything I just mentioned above flips on its axis.

I have noticed this through 5 separate times switching from the demo to real blackjack.

I do not want to say that I have come to the conclusion that it's rigged, so I'm generously falling back on to the fact that they do not use shoes, but rather generate a RANDOM numbered card every time a card is drawn, which takes a way from the finite aspect to a deck.

I doubt this is even illegal, but rather a heads up to stay away from DraftKings blackjack, as well other online forms of blackjack.
