Amazon Sues Users of Fiverr Over Fake Reviews

Writerful Books do not charge to write book reviews on Amazon.

The defendants in the new case, listed as "John Does," each used Fiverr to sell fake positive or 5-star Amazon reviews. In some cases, they even offered "Verified" reviews, meaning those where they buy the product provided they're compensated for that, of course. Other times, they also tell the purchaser to just provide the product review and they'll post it. The Fiverr site, for those unfamiliar, is an online marketplace where users can offer small tasks and services that begin at just $5, which is where it got its name. Most of the small jobs, or "gigs," as they're called are focused on things like offering writing, translation, design, editing, or programming, help. Of course, the site also became a resource for those looking for fake reviews and ratings, not only on Amazon, but also on other sites and services, including app stores.

QUESTS Complete daily quests to get free chips!

Then once you lose all your chips and go to the lowest table again.

That is NOT, that much to ask for seeing as we have to fight against the A.

Give this game a go, but really play with it for a while and get a good look at it to see for yourself before you spend money.

Is not realistic.

Never in our life have we lost with 20 as many times as this game.

Stay away.

The last few tournaments I've played in, I'm playing a lot more than I

've played in any tournament since the last tournament.

I had some great games and I think I was one of the better players in the tournament.
