Before we dive in deeper, understand that gambling is regulated in the country, and the regulations in place are based on the Public Gaming Act of 1867.

With this alone, online casino and betting activities are then considered neither legal nor illegal.

Sikkim and Meghalaya have licensing authority for online casino gaming and sports betting.

However, licensing doesn't include the residents of their states.

Kerala also had to go through the same thing.

With the recent happenings surrounding online gaming legislation in the states mentioned earlier, India is still having a hard time deciding what is and isn't gambling.

Recently, the Ministry of Electronics and IT (MeitY) announced that there is a legislation draft surrounding online gambling throughout India that's ready to be reviewed.
