It seems CEO of The Walt Disney Company Bob Iger agrees somewhat with his predecessor, Bob Chapek, on one thing: sports betting.

During today's Morgan Stanley Technology, Media and Telecom Conference, Iger spoke about betting, stating that he thinks it is the future of the sports business, although he's more reluctant to dive into it.

Iger said today that while it wasn't an immediate thing, he felt that it's “inevitable” for sports entertainment production to become seamlessly aligned with sports betting.

“I'd prefer to wait as long as possible, but when I think about them, I think it's inevitable that there'll be .

.”
