First, you need to find a product that you want to review. The product should be related to a topic you know a lot about. This will make your review more credible.

It is easier to grow your channel if you focus on a niche (i.e. camera equip) Tj T* BT /F1 1

One of the main ways you can make money doing reviews is through affiliate links.

. When you join the affiliate program of an online store they will allow you to create special links, called affiliate links, to products listed there. You post these affiliate links in the descriptions of your video reviews and, if viewers choose to click on those links and buy the products, you will earn a sales comm ission. Here are some stores with great affiliate programs:

Part 2: Getting Products for Free

Once you've built up authority as a reviewer, brands will start giving you f ree stuff to review. Until then, you can buy the products yourself or review pro ducts which you already own. It will be a lot cheaper to review things you alrea dy have, or which you were already planning to buy, than to buy products for the purpose of reviewing them. Your reviews will also be more detailed and useful w hen they are on products you are especially familiar with.

Once you start building a following, brands will come to you and it will be your choice whether you want to review the things they send you. Until then, try to promote/review products you already have opinions on.

Part 3: Filming the Video

Bottom Line

If you were going to be paid to review products on YouTube, what kinds of produc ts would they be? And if you want to make the reviewing video better, you should use a video editing software like Filmora .
