Amazon's profit nearly doubled in the fourth quarter as the e-commerce giant was able to offset the rising costs of running its vast e-commerce business with its investment in Rivian, an electric car company. The company also said it would raise the price of its popular Prime membership.

Still, earnings per share almost doubled to $27.75 and trounced analysts expectations of $3.48. Amazon Chief Financial Officer Brian Olsavsky credited the IPO of Rivian, which Amazon had invested in, for boosting net income by $11.8 billion . At the operating level, which doesn't include the proceeds of investments, operating income nearly halved to $3.5 billion. Amazon share prices rose after the company released its report, climbing more than 14% in value after a closing price of $2,777.
