How would these odds be affected if the match is struck to a goalless draw at halftime? Even if the home team is absolutely dominating the match, with strikers hitting the bar twice and having already had a goal disallowed, and the opponent delivering some dangerous counterattacks?

Also, the specific second-half betting markets are taking no consideration of what happened to the first half.

80 or higher at halftime to be considered a tempting one.

Club	Country	2nd Half Goals	Total Goals	%
Leganes	Spain	26	34	76,5%
Freiburg	Germany	23	32	71,9%
Alaves	Spain	28	40	70%
Benevento	Italy	22	33	66,7%
Hertha Berlin	Germany	28	43	65,1%
Swansea	England (Wales)	18	28	64,3%
Rennes	France	32	50	64%
Chievo	Italy	23	36	63,9%
Atletico Madrid	Spain	37	58	63,8%

Which is the most important conclusion someone could bring away from this? If you look carefully at the table, you'll find no powerhouses such as Bayern Munich, Juventus, Paris Saint Germain or FC Barcelona.

There's a 52% long-term possibility of both teams scoring at least one goal in the second half.

For example, Liverpool has scored after 75th minute at over 50% of their Premier League matches during the 2018-19 season (11/19 home and 9/19 away).

In the list below, you can discover the top betting sites that offer high odds and the broadest range of markets for 2nd half betting.

Can you bet on sports without a social security number?

Yes, you can bet on sports without a social security number.

Social security numbers are rarely needed for in-person sports betting, which is different than withdrawing money.

You can walk into a sportsbook and make bets without your social security number, but if you plan on withdrawing more than $600, you'll need a social security number for tax purposes.

The main piece of identification needed for betting at sportsbooks is a driver's license because four states require bettors to be at least 18 years old and the rest set the limit at 21.

It's a slightly different situation online because operators like DraftKings and FanDuel require the last four digits of your social security number to deposit and sign up for an account.

The main reason it's needed is because if you win over $600 at an online sportsbook, they are required to report your winnings.
